Exciting new startup

Competitive salary plus good benefits and EMI share scheme

Acano is an exciting new start-up founded by a team of highly experienced engineers who have a proven track record of numerous previous successful start-ups.

With our R&D headquarters based in Uxbridge, West London, we develop products which unite previously incompatible audio, video and web technologies in coSpaces—virtual meeting rooms, only radically better.

We expect to be very successful and to expand fast over the next 2 years; therefore we are looking for a range of graduate disciplines including software, hardware, test and product specialist engineers.

Acano places considerable emphasis on finding the very best graduates. Graduates who join us rapidly become highly valuable members of the R&D team.

We know that our great products and commercial success spring directly from the intellectual energy and technical passion that our R&D teams put into their work; therefore we ensure we provide an environment that cultivates the talents of our graduates.

Acano is built on a strong foundation of values and a culture that is quite unique in the industry.
